

These are the Salvadorean entries from the original classified annex of the 90-Day Report on Corrupt Officials in El Salvador, Honduras, and Guatemala transmitted to the Congress in April 2021. These five entries were declassified on May 4, 2021.

Section 1: Senior Government Officials Credibly Alleged to have Committed or Facilitated Corruption or Narcotics Trafficking

El Salvador

Carolina Recinos, current Chief of Cabinet in President Nayib Bukele's administration, engaged in significant acts of corruption during her term in office.

Jose Luis Merino, former vice minister for foreign investment and financing for development and legislator of El Salvador and current financier of the FMLN party, engaged in significant acts of corruption during his term in office.

Rogelio Rivas, current Minister of Security and Justice in El Salvador, engaged in significant acts of corruption by awarding his own private construction company several noncompetitive and unadvertised contracts to build police stations and other buildings that fall under his official capacity and inflated the cost of materials.

Guillermo Gallegos, current legislator from the GANA party of El Salvador, engaged in significant acts of corruption throughout his term in office.

Sigfrido Reyes, former legislator from the FMLN party of El Salvador, engaged in significant acts of corruption during his term in office. Credible sources corroborate corruption allegations that Sigfrido Reyes misappropriated public funds for personal benefit when he authorized and laundered fraudulent travel expenses.
